Exploration update

The Company has not yet determined whether the Company's properties contain an economic mineral reserve. There are no known reserves of minerals on any of the Company's mineral exploration properties and any activities of the Company thereon will constitute exploratory searches for minerals. See "Risk Factors" below.

Mercedes Property

The Technical Report Author considers the Mercedes Property prospective for further exploration and La Lamosa is the most deserving of immediate follow up work. Mineralization is indicated by previous drilling and supported by recent rock chip and soil sampling. Field investigations suggest that previous drilling may not have been oriented to intersect the target zone at an optimal angle. Diamond drilling is recommended to test down-dip extensions, establish the width and length of mineralization at La Lamosa. Surface geochemistry including rock chip/grab sampling, soil sampling and reconnaissance geological mapping is recommended for outlying areas in order to better evaluate the surrounding property.

Drilling is recommended in thirteen holes on five sections for a total of 2030m (Figure No. 13, Table 8 from the Technical Report). The program is presented into two sequential phases and they could be run contemporaneously if budgets allow. The proposed exploration target is to identify mineralization within a zone 20-30m wide over a strike length of 220m and a down dip length in excess of 240m.

The proposed drilling above is based upon historical diamond drilling data which may contain actual lateral variation of up to 12m. Historical data are probably not sufficiently robust for inclusion in a future resource estimate calculation. They do, however, provide the explorer with invaluable information as to expected mineralization distribution and general footprint of mineralization. It is highly recommended that the existing drill locations be verified by way of DGPS or similar survey and the historical database updated. Such a survey could aid the explorer by indicating areas on the hill where minor adjustments to proposed drilling may be warranted.

In addition to drilling, surface sampling and geological mapping is included in the recommendations as the Technical Report Author considers the project of sufficient merit to potentially host additional mineralized zones. With this in mind, systematic reconnaissance and detailed geological mapping is suggested over the claim area. Any altered or mineralized rocks should be sampled during this work.

Phase I drilling and support activities are estimated to cost US$498,700, and entire recommended budget totals approximately US$600,000 as detailed in Table 9 below.

Operating activities were affected by share-based compensation of $37,225, exploration costs of $1,012,332, which included shares of 2,442,105 shares issued at $0.30 per share and 1,000,000 shares issued at $0.28 per share and a net change in non-cash working capital balances of 2,496,661 because of a decrease in funds in escrow of $2,652,799, an increase in receivables and other assets of $130,005 and a decrease in accounts payable and other liabilities of $26,133. Liquidity and Financial Position

The Company derives no income from operations, as all of its projects since inception have been exploration projects. Accordingly, the activities of the Company have been financed by cash raised through private placements of securities and its initial public offering. As the Company does not expect to generate cash flows from operations in the near future, it will continue to rely primarily upon the sale of securities to raise capital. As a result, the availability of financing, as and when needed, to fund the Company's activities cannot be assured. See "Risk Factors" below.

During fiscal 2019, the Company's corporate head office costs are estimated to average less than $200,000 per month. Head office costs include professional fees, reporting issuer costs, business development costs and administrative costs. Head office costs exclude project generation and evaluation costs. The cost of acquisition and work commitments on new acquisitions cannot be accurately estimated. The Company believes it has adequate working capital for the twelve months ending September 30, 2020 to fund its corporate head office costs and its exploration activities.

In addition, the Company's estimated exploration budget is US$700,000, which will be spent or deferred as required.

It is anticipated that further financings will be required from related party loans or an equity issue to continue corporate and exploration activities. There can be no assurance that additional financing from related parties or others will be available at all, or on terms acceptable to the Company. For these reasons, management considers it to be in the best interests of the Company and its shareholders to afford management a reasonable degree of flexibility as to how the funds are employed, or for other purposes, as needs arise.

See "Risk Factors" below and "Caution Note Regarding Forward-Looking Statements" above.

Additional measures have been undertaken or are under consideration to further reduce corporate overhead.
